MEMORIAL DAY AT GETTYSBURG

Seven Thousand People Visit Gettysburg on Monday. Ceremony at National Cemetery never More Impressive. The Oration.

Seven thousand people from many states visited Gettysburg on Monday and it will be remembered as one of the most notable Memorial Days the town has had. Never on any similar occasion have the crowds been so large except on days when there was some special attraction such as the visit of Roosevelt or Taft. The town was literally thronged with visitors from early morning until the last train pulled out in the evening.

The Western Maryland handled 5500 tourists and the Reading brought in many hundred more while the number from the country was unusually large. The first train arrived from Elkins, West Virginia, shortly after seven o'clock and the other specials followed in rapid succession. The traffic was well handled by the Western Maryland and the trains were gotten out in good time in the evening.

The crowd was orderly and there were few cases of drunkenness. Several arrests of drunks and disorderlies were made and one visitor was placed in the lock-up charged with trying to flim-flam passengers on their journey here. The rain late in the afternoon caused a hurried rush for shelter but the exercises at the cemetery were over when it started and the ceremonies of the day were not marred.

THE PARADE

The parade in the afternoon was in charge of William A. McIlhenney and was made up of the Citizens' Band, the Grand Army and Spanish American War veterans, the Gettysburg Sons of Veterans, the York Cadets and the local patriotic orders. The school children, each carrying a bouquet of flowers, preceded the main parade to the cemetery.

The National Cemetery was never more beautiful than on Monday and the exercises of the day were never more impressively rendered. Over each grave of known and unknown dead fluttered a small United States flag and as the veterans, school children and members of the patriotic orders marched across the graves scattering flowers the strains of "Nearer My God to Thee" rose in the distance making the ceremony most beautiful and impressive. A salute of three guns was fired by the York Cadets and taps sounded. Preceding the strewing of flowers the Grand Army memorial service had been rendered.

At the rostrum Dr. T. C. Billheimer presided. The band rendered "America." Rev. Joseph B. Baker offered prayer and the oration of the day was delivered by Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, congressman from New York, who had for the subject of his address "The Spirit of Gettysburg." Judge Swope recited Lincoln's Gettysburg address and after the benediction the exercises were at an end. Congressman Fassett said in part:

CONGRESSMAN FASSETT

"As we gather here today, surrounded on every hand by the mute witnesses of a mighty contest waged here nearly half a century ago; as imagination endeavors to reconstruct the sublime spectacle of the three days' fight of Gettysburg, I seem to hear from out the rushing squadrons, the shouts and shrieks of men, the rattle of musketry and the thundering reverberations of the iron-throated guns, the words spoken to Moses from the burning bush: 'Put off now thy shoes from off thy feet for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.' For this, too, is holy ground, consecrated to liberty and union, and hallowed by the martyrs for truth's sake who sleep beneath its sod.

"We are here as loyal citizens of the United States to mourn and praise our dead. We are here to celebrate the spirit of liberty and those who fought for it; to honor the spirit of equality and those who died for it; to dedicate ourselves anew to the spirit of the Union and to those who saved it; to reverence the spirit of obedience to duty and those who heeded it. We are standing on one of the mountain tops of history and come to get a clearer view of what has gone before, and to learn how best to chart our journey for the future.

"The men whose deeds we commemorate here today fought unselfishly, they fought for no increase of wealth or extension of dominion, for no personal advantage or individual gain, but for their country and their Constitution. They fought not so much for their rights as for their duties, not so much for themselves as for others. Their cause was the increasing cause of all the ages that have gone before, and the imperative need of all the generations that were yet to come. Their consecration to their cause led them to sacrifice, to battle and to death. Not every great cause leads to battle and to death. Only a few are called upon to die for their country, but all of us are called upon to live for our country. These men taught us how to live as well as how to die.

"The deadliest foes of the permanence of our institutions are civic indifference and civic apathy; the one is a treason and the other is a crime. Universal individual interest in and aggressive participation in public affairs is the price we must pay for present welfare and future prosperity. It is suicidal folly to look to some exceptional man, no matter how highly gifted he may be, to see to it that the public suffers no harm. That way lies dictatorship. Just in proportion as each citizen meets this duty of interest in public affairs will the stability of our institutions be assured. It has cost the effort of ages to secure the right to each citizen for an equal voice at the ballot box. This right must be exercised that it may produce its finest fruits.

"To each American comes with an urgency unknown elsewhere in the world the need of the cultivation of the highest conception of civic duty and patriotism. We cannot forever be receiving from society all its various forms of assistance and protection and never give back any contribution of our own. No man has any right to demand any better government than he himself is willing to contribute to effect. It is this unescapable personal responsibility which must be faced and accepted by every American citizen. Just so far as we are willing to pay this price just that near shall we come to being a nation rejoicing in equal opportunity to all founded in choice and established in justice.

"We celebrate here today the spirit of Gettysburg, the spirit of unselfish service, the spirit of fidelity even unto death. We celebrate here devotion to the cause of humanity, determination which against all odds, setting self aside, sacrifices self that others may live. The spirit of Gettysburg is the spirit of the square deal and fair play, the spirit which resolves to do no wrong and to suffer none, the spirit which puts self last and duty first. This is the lesson spoken from these voiceless graves. We are here reminded that no man lives to himself alone, but each for all. Some must suffer that others may enjoy. Some must sow that others may reap.

"And as we bid these heroes again our annual hail and farewell, we renew with the great President the high resolve that through no fault of ours shall those who died here have died in vain."

MAY DESIRE MORE GROUND

Congressman Lefean Shows Plans for New Public Building in Gettysburg. Says More Ground for Site may be Bought.

Congressman D. F. Lefean was one of the Memorial Day visitors in Gettysburg and showed to a large number of people, during his stay here, the plans for the proposed public building in this place. He expressed himself as being confident of receiving an appropriation of $100,000 for the building at this session of Congress and intimated that an additional appropriation would likely follow, after which it was probable that more ground would be acquired.

Mr. Lefean showed a plan which calls for a brick and stone structure of unusual architectural beauty. The building would be of three stories, the first to be used for the post office, the second for the offices of the National Park Commission and the third as a battlefield museum.

The building is to be 90 x 60 feet and, as it is desired that there be free space on all four sides, Congressman Lefean said that it would likely be considered best to take in the entire half block at the corner of Baltimore and High streets. This plan, if carried out, would necessitate the purchase of the "Compiler" building.

The building is to be placed about twenty five feet in the rear of the pavement line and will be so located as to bring out to best advantage its imposing character. The plans were drawn by the Government architect. The full and complete details of the plans, Mr. Lefean said, would not be finished for eighteen months, but at the same time he said that he believed the people now occupying the properties purchased by the government would have to vacate April 1, 1911.

The design shown by Congressman Lefean was seen by many Gettysburg people and, without exception, was greatly admired. Mr. Lefean also showed plans for proposed post office buildings at York and Hanover. These two places will receive only one story structures as there is no need for a three story building as at Gettysburg.

Famine in Amoy Region.

Bryan Goes to Liverpool.

Receives Word of Son's Drowning.

Norton, Va., May 31.—Thomas Cowden received a message from Lurich that his son, Belt, had been drowned. Young Cowden's home had been at West Norton, where he lived with his father. He left three weeks ago and the family could not locate him.

Uncle Solon Winslow had secured a succession of four admirable wives, all of whom had been removed from the scene of their earthly activities by one cause or another within a period of twenty years.

Uncle Solon's weddings had grown to be so much a matter of course that when, after a year of widowhood, he announced his approaching fifth marriage one of his neighbors said, "Well, Solon, I suppose they seem pretty natural to you by this time—weddings, I mean."

"This one won't," said the prospective bridegroom, "for old Parson Frost's off on his three months' leave, you know, and he's never failed to tie the knot for me."

"I said to Susan that I didn't know he'd hardly seem like a wedding to me without him, and she said to me that 'twas her turn to choose this time, and she intended to start out with young Parson Corner over to the Center, and if he did well she guessed she'd stick to him."

"She didn't explain what she meant," added Uncle Solon thoughtfully, "but it sounded kind of ominous to me."

LIVELY FIGHTING IN NICARAGUA

Rebel Forces Resist Desperate Attack on Trenches.

BLUEJACKETS AT SCENE

More United States Marines Were Landed at Bluefields to Protect American Interests.

Bluefields, by wireless to Colon, May 31.—General Lara, commanding the Nicaraguan regular troops, made an unsuccessful attempt at 3 o'clock in the morning to rush the trenches held on the left flank of General Estrada's position. The fighting was the heaviest that has taken place during the operations around Bluefields, and the losses were proportionately severe. It is reported on what seems to be excellent authority that the dead and wounded in Monday's struggle alone footed up 250. The revolutionists captured 150 prisoners, most of whom were in shocking physical condition and who agree in the belief that General Lara has abandoned hope of carrying Bluefields by storm, as he evidently expected to do.

The provisional government here has issued a decree transferring the custom house from Bluefields bluff to the main harbor. Ships arriving are now compelled to transfer their freight and passengers to the schooner Caye, which is stationed three miles off the mouth of the harbor of Escondido.

It is learned that there was nearly a clash on last Friday night between the Madriz gunboat and the American man-of-war Paducah. Irias, the commander of the Venus, gave notice that it was his intention to bombard the Estrada trenches. In order to reach them with his guns it would have been necessary to throw shells over the city proper. The commander of the Paducah cleared his vessel for action and notified the Nicaraguans that he would sink the Venus if a single shot was fired. The Venus withdrew from her position and has kept in the background since.

More marines from Colon were landed here. It is recognized that their presence was needed, as the situation is exceedingly critical. Details of the capture of Bluefields bluff seem to confirm the charges of treachery on the part of General Zeledon, who was accused at the time. While the loss of the position was a heavy blow to Estrada, it is not believed now that General Lara can take the city by siege.

ROOSEVELT HAS TALK WITH ROOT

Long Secret Conference Was Held in London.

London, May 31.—Senator Elihu Root met former President Roosevelt by appointment at Ambassador Reid's home and the two had a long talk. Asked later what kept them together so long, Colonel Roosevelt laughingly said:

"This is one of the cases in which I must observe my usual reticence."

Senator Root has come to Europe in connection with the Newfoundland fisheries case which is to be settled by arbitration at The Hague.

It long has been expected that Colonel Roosevelt would meet the senator from New York in Europe, and while the former president was at Khartoum it was said he had invited Mr. Root to come to see him. It was believed later that the especial object of the conference would be to have the "administration" side of the Ballinger-Pinchot case presented to the former president. The Pinchot-Garfield-Clavis side, it is understood, was presented to Roosevelt by Gifford Pinchot, the former forester.

Mr. Root also was expected to give a full history of President Taft's first year in office to his predecessor, an outline having been forwarded to Colonel Roosevelt as soon as he emerged from the jungle.

Returning from the week-end at Edw. N. Butler's country place in Essex, Colonel Roosevelt became the guest of the Royal Geographical society at luncheon. The luncheon was given at the Hotel Metropole, Major Leonard Darwin, president of the society, presiding.

"She didn't explain what she meant," added Uncle Solon thoughtfully, "but it sounded kind of ominous to me."

North Wales, Pa., May 31.—While making the Memorial Day address to the Grand Army lodge and people in the school house here, Jason Sexton dropped over dead.

MR. TAFT REVIEWS NEW YORK'S PARADE

Grand Army Marchers Cheered by Thousands.

New York, May 31.—New York observed Memorial Day, not merely with traditional ceremonies, but with the unusual honor of the presence in the city of the president of the United States to review the parade of the veterans.

President Taft arrived early from Washington, and was driven to the home of his brother, Henry W. Taft, in West Forty-eighth street. The trip to the reviewing stand was then in order. The Old Guard was the president's special escort, and a guard of honor was made up of the veteran corps, artillery, Military Society of the War of 1812. The party invited to surround Mr. Taft on the reviewing stand comprised Major Generals Daniel E. Sickles and Julius H. Stahl, Brigadier Generals Anson G. McCook, Horace Porter, Nicholas W. Day, Walter Howe, John T. Lockman and Thomas H. Hubbard, together with a number of congressmen and other notables.

Many other ceremonies of a patriotic nature marked the day in the city. These included services at Grant's tomb, on Riverside drive, by U. S. Grant Post, G. A. R., and decoration of graves of veterans in the cemeteries, while Grand Army exercises took place at night in Carnegie hall.

An interesting civic event of the holiday was the work horse parade up Fifth avenue.

After reviewing the parade President Taft returned to his brother's residence for luncheon. He had received a great ovation all along the route on the way to the stand and was repeatedly cheered as he took the place of honor among the reviewers. Mr. Taft smiled and bowed and beamed appreciatively at the spontaneous tributes.

As the ranks of the veterans came marching by the acclaim of the assembled throngs was turned from the reviewers to the reviewed. None joined more heartily in the cheering for the men in the "thin line of blue" than President Taft himself.

STRIKERS WON'T WORK

Coal Miners Refuse the Plan of Their Leader.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 31.—The 12,000 striking mine workers of the Pennsylvania Coal company decided by a large majority to repudiate the action of their committees representing the nine idle collieries in agreeing that they shall return to work pending an adjustment of their grievances by the company's officers.

They claim that they will not submit to such a slow method of settlement and that they will not return to work until the officers made them a definite pledge that they will have the dockage reduced and that they will get credit for each 100 pounds of coal that they place in the cars.

The outlook now is that the strike will continue for some time, as the company officers declare they will not make any settlement while the men remain on strike.

WHY HENS DON'T HATCH.
There is general complaint that early clucking hens were scarce. This shows that lots of people didn't get winter eggs, for hens seldom sit until after they lay. But it's different now from grandma's time. In those days the whole shelling went broody in the warm months.
The big barn was lined with them. But the incubator gave the chick a black eye. People want eggs, not clucks, and the broody quality is being bred out of them.
In grandpa's time hens would sit on a corncock, a doorknob or a fence post, but most hens now are hatched by machinery and "just grow" and don't know how to sit.
Just so with Pekin ducks hatched in incubators. They seldom hatch, and even love for swimming has been bred out of them.
Then there are the breeds that seldom brood—the Mediterranean class, such as Leghorns and Minorcas. These are the great layers, and, thinking to get more eggs, poultry raisers cross these nonlayers with others and thus change the characteristics of the stock so they don't sit.
Millions of five day old chicks are now shipped all over the United States to people who don't care to set cocks, but want their chickens ready made.

DON'TS.
Don't get scared about chicks getting white diarrhea if you can't brood and feed right. We don't have it here. Follow "Poultry Notes" and you'll be clear.
Don't think you are the sum of it all. Oh, what a buff! Oh, what a consummate gail!
Don't stuff your chicks with yellow corn if you want them crystal white, 20 per cent will do all right.
Don't think because a fancier is a judge that his birds are always the best ever. Judges are made, not born, and most of them are homemade or made by a paid puff in a poultry journal.
Don't let grass grow and go to waste under your feet. Turn it into gander meat.

Free Child's Remedy

What mother is not looking for something that will help her children in the little ills of life, something for the stomach trouble and the bowel trouble? Long ago she probably has become convinced that a child cannot readily swallow a pill or a tablet, and that to "break them in half and crush them" is an annoyance; that usually they work too drastically, and are nauseating and too powerful for the little one's stomach.

Any mother who will take the trouble of sending her name and address can obtain a free sample bottle of a remedy that thousands of other mothers are using and now paying for. This remedy is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and the offer of a free trial bottle is open to any mother who has not yet used it. Having used it and convinced yourself that it is what you want, you can obtain it in the future of your drug store at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as so many others are doing. The free sample being simply to convince you of its merits. It is the best way to begin on it. Mrs. L. Davis of 187 W. Harrison street, Chicago, and Mrs. Mary Belford, 1710 Coke street, Louisville, Ky., both started with a free sample and now they write that they have never been without a bottle in the house since.

It is undoubtedly a great family remedy, as it is adapted to all ages, being mild and pleasant to take and yet thoroughly effective. It is especially the ideal remedy for children and women and old folks, who need something pure, mild and natural. It has the advantage of being a thorough laxative and yet contains tonic properties. Use it for the most stubborn constipation, indigestion, liver trouble, sick headache, sour stomach and such complaints with a guarantee that it will cure.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. I explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R. 521 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

GIRL'S BODY FOUND IN CELLAR

Corpse of Alma Kellner in School Basement.

A COUNTRY-WIDE SEARCH

Mutilated Remains of Child Were Found in Three Feet of Water—Was Missing Since Last December.

Louisville, Ky., May 31.—The decomposed body of Alma Kellner, the eight-year-old girl who mysteriously disappeared from her home last December, was found in a sub-basement of St. John's school, at Clay and Walnut streets. The body was lying in three feet of water.

The body was positively identified as that of Alma Kellner by her uncle, Frank Fehr, a millionaire brewer of Louisville.

The condition of the body indicated that it had been in the hiding place for several months and that a crude attempt to bury it had been made.

The torso, a limb being missing, was wrapped in a piece of carpet. The missing limb was found later in another part of the cellar, the foot bearing the shoe. This latter feature is puzzling the police.

The scene of the gruesome find is only five blocks from the Kellner home, which is on Broadway, near Jackson.

Alma Kellner disappeared Dec. 8, and from that time until the body was found the case has been a mystery. She left her home on the morning in question to attend a service at St. John's church, and the last seen of her was when she waved goodbye to her mother in front of the residence.

The search for the missing girl extended all over the United States.

Plumber Found Body.

The body was found by a plumber who had been sent into the cellar to stop a leak in a water pipe, which had flooded the basement. The chief of police gave it out that he believed it to be a case of murder.

One hundred children convened in several rooms of the first and second floors were hurriedly dismissed from their classes and sent home when the discovery was reported to those in charge of the school.

The leak in the water pipe had caused water to flow until the floor was covered to a depth of about three feet. Lamps were quickly brought and the relatives of the child summoned.

The school adjoins St. John's church, where the Kellner family worshipped.

As the coroner's investigation was pursued it became evident that the girl had met her death in a horrible manner. Her skull was crushed and practically every bone in the body was broken and charred.

The coroner said it was evident that the body had been dismembered and packed in a stove or grate, but this means of disposition having perhaps been interrupted, quicklime had been used.

The cellar in which the body was discovered was searched four days after the girl's disappearance by two detectives, who inspected every corner of the room with lanterns and found nothing.

People began congregating in front of the school soon after the news was known, and by noon several thousand persons were excitedly discussing the case.

Belief gained ground that the little girl was seized by a man as she was within a few steps of the church and taken into the dark sub-cellar, where she met death.

On the morning of the day she disappeared in December, 1909, Alma Kellner, aged eight years, the daughter of Frederick F. Kellner, a Louisville, brewer, left her home in that city to go to church.

On Dec. 14 Alma's father offered a reward of $1000 for information that would lead to the whereabouts of the child, and Governor Wilson, of Kentucky, added a reward of $500. For a week or more thousands of residents of Louisville engaged in a search for little Alma, and so great was the interest in the missing girl that a mass meeting of citizens was held for the purpose of forming plans for conducting the search.

It was believed that Alma was being held for a ransom, although no negotiations were made in that direction, but the visit of a mysterious woman to the Kellner home a few days after the child's disappearance created the belief that she would be restored upon a payment of cash. Since then numerous reports of the finding of Alma, some of them having her dead and others alive, reached her parents through the police. Relatives of the missing child made many long and fruitless journeys by reason of those reports.

WOMAN CRAZED BY COMET

Fears World Will Be Destroyed and Tries to Demolish House.

Bridgeville, Del., May 31.—Declaring that Halley's comet would come to destroy the world, Bessie Houston, a girl living one mile from town, brooded over the manifestation until she went insane. She grabbed an axe, and, saying she would aid the destruction, smashed all the windows in her residence and attempted to tear down the house. Upon being examined by Drs. Cahall and Palmer she was pronounced insane and committed to the state asylum at Farnhurst.

Miss Houston was so impressed by the prediction of a certain sect that the comet would destroy the world that she worried over the matter until her mind became unbalanced.

YOUNG GOULD RUNS AWAY FROM SCHOOL

Edwin, Jr., Homesick, Starts to Walk Home.

New Britain, Conn., May 31.—Edwin Gould, Jr., son of Edwin Gould and a grandson of the late Jay Gould, was found on the street here and taken to the police station.

Young Gould ran away from the Pomfret school, in Pomfret Center, last Friday, and arrived here footsore and weary. His grandmother, Mrs. George Shady, of New York, is on the way here.

Patrick Quirk, an officer, was attracted to the youngster, who is sixteen years old, as he limped, footsore, along the street. The officer spoke to the boy, who gave his name and said he wished to have his grandmother, Mrs. Shady, notified. The officer took young Gould to the station until inquiry could be made as to the truth of his story.

Young Gould went to sleep, and on awakening told the history of his adventures. He said he had been at the Pomfret school for three months and had grown homesick. His parents had promised to run up and see him a week ago, and when they did not come he concluded he would try and walk to New York. He had only 75 cents, and he knew he could not ride, so on Friday afternoon he struck out in the general direction of New York.

Friday night he came to Williamantic, and found a place to doze in near the railroad station. He did not mind sleeping in the open. He got hungry, though. All day Saturday, Gould said, he plugged along over the roads, making about fifty miles and reaching Hartford at night. He went to a 15 cent lodging house. Young Gould said:

"They put me in a room with six or seven colored men who were not clean. I could not stand it. I did not know just which way to go. I went in cycles Sunday evening I guess into a farm somewhere near a city, but the farmer turned me out. Then I kept on walking, until an officer spoke to me and took me to the station house."

Young Gould was at the point of dropping from exhaustion. His money was gone, and from what he said he had very little to eat.

FLYING TUBE KILLS MAN

Tire Was Being Pumped Up When Accident Took Place.

Chester, Pa., May 31.—Frank D. Marshall, forty-five years old, a milkman of Marcus Hook, was killed by being struck in the face by the inner tube of an automobile tire which Charles Guyer, chief clerk in the offices of the Dupont Powder company, in Wilmington, Del., was filling near Marshall's home.

There was a loud report and the inner tube flew out, striking Marshall, whose face was cut almost in two. He died on the way to the Chester hospital. His wife, who was standing at the front door of her home and who witnessed the accident, is frenzied by grief.

Girl Dies on Way to Circus.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 31.—Annie Diamond, aged sixteen years, while coming from her home in Anville to see a circus in this city, became ill on a trolley car. At Hummelstown she was taken from the car and died five minutes later in a doctor's office. The physician detected symptoms of poisoning. The coroner will investigate.

His Point of Order.

A prominent clergyman was asked by a colored minister to preach in the colored people's church, and he gladly consented. Reaching the church, where he was the only paleface present, the preacher delivered a sermon full of helping advice, made an eloquent prayer and then announced that the service would be closed by singing the hymn "Wash Me and I Will Be Whiter Than Snow." At this point one of the darksome congregation rose to his feet.

SHIPPERS ATTACK THE RAILROADS

Will Try to Dissolve the Traffic Associations.

COMPLAINT OF THE WEST

Notice of Increase in Freight Rates Raises Storm and Attorney General Promises to Investigate.

Washington, May 31.—Attorney General Wickersham promised representatives of a shippers' association from the middle west that the department of justice would investigate the threatened advance in railroad freight rates for points west and southwest of Chicago. Should these advances, notice of which has been filed with the interstate commerce commission, prove to be unreasonable, it is possible that the department of justice may attempt to dissolve the railroad traffic associations as monopolies in restraint of trade. This action is asked by the representatives of the shippers' association.

About ten days ago notice was filed with the interstate commerce commission that there was to be a general advance in freight rates west from Chicago of from 20 to 50 per cent. Following this almost immediately came notice from eastern roads leading to Chicago of an advance of 20 per cent and more in rates. There was a suspicion then that the railroad traffic associations of the country had agreed on a general advance in freight rates, following the advance in wages. Experts of the interstate commerce commission figured out that the 10 per cent advance in wages were offset twice or three times over by the proposed advance in freight rates.

Club Over Congress.

Following the announcement of the proposed advances in freight rates came the charge from the middle west that the railroads were endeavoring to force congress into acceptance of amendments to the Sherman anti-trust law legalizing traffic agreements, which the house had rejected. It was asserted, also, that, fearing severe prohibitive legislation against such agreements, the railroads had determined to boost their rates to the highest point that they might have advantage in their contest with the interstate commerce commission over reductions.

To prevent the railroads from securing this position of advantage the Shippers' association of the middle west descended on Washington, and, at an interview with Attorney General Wickersham, urged immediate action by the government to stay the railroads until there could be an investigation of the advances scheduled by the interstate commerce commission.

Before the conference with Attorney General Wickersham, Senator Clapp was in conference with former Senator Spooner, who was here to look after the interests of railroads. His visit is said to have to do with railroad legislation rather than with the fight against increased rates.

MOTHER AND CHILD KILLED

Another Woman Fatally Injured When Railroad Train Struck Woman.

Lancaster, Pa., May 31.—A woman and her daughter were killed and another woman fatally injured in a Pennsylvania railroad grade crossing accident near here.

The Pittsburg day express west, which a short time ago killed Mrs. Monroe Hostetter near here, ran down a wagon occupied by Mrs. Tobias Leaman, aged sixty years; her daughter, Mrs. Phares B. Buckwalter, thirty-five years old, and the latter's daughter, Lila, aged fifteen, at the crossing between Gordonville and Ronks.

Mrs. Buckwalter and her daughter were instantly killed and Mrs. Leaman, who was brought to a hospital here, was injured beyond recovery. The bodies of the victims were badly mangled.

Her Long Suit.

"Mrs. Promoter informs me that you and I are to be partners in the whist game at her card party tonight," imparted the major, meeting the clever Mrs. Flurry on the avenue. "I didn't know you played whist."

"Oh, I play a little, major. It's a beautiful day, isn't it?"

"Yes. Now let me give you a pointer," rejoined the major, who was as earnest in his whist playing as he was in his whist game. "In the game tonight if you have long suit use it."

"Very well, major, I shall. There goes Mrs. Skiffle, whom I want to see. Goodbye, major. I'll see you at the whist game, and I'll wear my long suit."—Judge's Library.

Mrs. Charles Gilbert, 128 W. Middle Street, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "My health was very poor as the result of disordered kidneys. I had but little appetite, could not sleep well and was subject to backache and headaches. Often I had dizzy spells and chills and I always felt worse when I caught cold. One of my relatives finally advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a box at the People's Drug Store. They proved to be all that was claimed for them, giving me prompt and permanent relief. I advise the use of this remedy in all cases of kidney complaint."

RESOLUTIONS

Since it has pleased Almighty God to take from this world the soul of our deceased brother, Charles W. Patterson, we, members of the council of Grace Church, Two Taverns, Pa., desire to pay this tribute of respect to the memory of our departed fellow worker.

Resolved, that while we humbly submit to the will of Him Who does all things well in the death of brother Patterson we have lost a true friend on whose fidelity we could at all times with safety rely; our community has lost a good citizen whose desire always was to help his neighbors; our Church has lost a trusted officer whose ambition was that through her he might glorify his God.

Resolved, that we, members of the Church council, be warned by this visitation of Providence to be faithful to our trust, loyal to duty, and upright in our conduct toward our fellow men.

Resolved, that we express to the bereaved family our sense of grief and commend them to God whose mercies are over all.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, that they be spread upon the minutes of the Church Council and given to the press for publication.

A GETTYSBURG STORY

The Star Independent, of Harrisburg, prints the following: "At the time of the battle Gettysburg had a Burgess named H. J. Stable, a fine, great-hearted man, who was the founder and editor of the Gettysburg Compiler, the Democratic organ of Adams county. In the spring of 1863 the Borough Council had forbidden the firing of guns within the borough limits, and as July drew near Burgess Stable issued the usual proclamation against the firing of guns in the borough. The Union army under Meade and the Confederate army under Lee were both headed for Gettysburg, and the story goes that the doughty Burgess sent messengers to Meade and Lee that if they violated the ordinance against firing guns within the borough limits he would have them both arrested and fined. What replies the two commanders sent back is not a matter of history, and Burgess Stable would never tell. But the fight took place all the same, and they do say that there was firing within the borough limits, but nobody was arrested."

TESTING SUGAR BEET SEED.

Upon Its Roots Ability of Roots to Produce Maximum Quantity of Sugar.

Testing the roots is one of the most important steps in the production of beet seed, since the value of the seed depends not only upon its quality from the standpoint of germination, but also upon the ability of the roots produced to store a maximum quantity of sugar with a minimum quantity of salts. With our present knowledge of seed production the standard of high grade seed can be maintained only by the most careful and rigid testing and elimination of all roots that are not of a satisfactory quality. Having selected roots of suitable size and shape, a typical core is removed by means of a drill which is passed through the beet at an angle, as shown in the illustration. This core is tested for sugar by the usual polariscopic methods. The ability of a seed grower to maintain high quality in the root is one of the most important conditions in the establishment and maintenance of the beet seed industry, says the year book of the department of agriculture.

There is a great deal of confusion in the minds of plant breeders regarding the real purpose of the selection of the roots from the standpoint of sugar content. Careful observation would seem to indicate that breeding and selection for high sugar content have to do mainly with the elimination of those individual roots that will not respond readily to favorable conditions of soil and climate with respect to the formation and storage of sugar and the preservation and perpetuation of those roots that will respond to those conditions. High sugar content, therefore, does not seem to be a fixed character in the same sense as color, form, etc., but will vary to a marked degree when the conditions of growth are changed. For example, seeds from the same plant when planted in different parts of the country have been known to produce roots having a difference of more than 7 per cent in the sugar content, while the shape, color and general habits of growth remained the same. The importance of selecting the seed for sugar content cannot be over-estimated, and, because of the importance of this work and the difficulties attending it, sugar beet seed growing can be carried on successfully only with special equipment, by the exercise of the greatest care and consequently at considerable expense.

Free Seed Graft.

The grangers of Washington state or many of them are not disposed to receive free seeds from their congressmen at the national capital any longer. In many instances these seed packets are sent to grange secretaries for distribution to procure the favor of grange members. A grange paper published in Washington state suggests to grangers that they are not wanted and demand that the custom of sending out free government seeds be abolished. These seeds are burdening our already overburdened mails, and then congress refuses to give us a parcels post service because the mail service is a losing proposition. If it is necessary that the government buy the old seeds from the seed dealers, then it would be better to burn them at once than to send them through the mails and have them burned at this end.

TIMIDITY OF LOVE.

A Veteran of the Civil War Quails Before a Woman

By ARNOLD BROWN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

It was April —, 1861. The —th regiment was ordered to march the next day to the defense of Washington. A reception was to be held the evening before departure in the armory, at which mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts could bid adieu to their loved ones, some of whom might not return. During the afternoon previous to the reception young Norman Egerton, second lieutenant of G company, sat at a desk in his comfortable home writing. This is what he wrote:

I have delayed to speak, fearing to be repelled, but now at the last moment I must tell you that I love you—love you better than my life—everything but my duty. May I hope if I return that I may claim you for my wife? If "Yes," wear one of these flowers tonight at the reception.

The words, such as a boy would write who realized into what he was going, were intended for Miss Mabel Harding, even younger than himself. They were written on a bit of thin paper, which he folded into a small compass, and, taking up a bouquet that lay beside him, he thrust his missive into its center, covering it with the flowers as if fearful the girl would find it. Calling a servant, he directed him to carry the flowers to their destination and report to him that they had been received by the young lady. Then he waited the floor till the report had been made.

That night at the armory he watched eagerly for the signal. Presently he saw Miss Harding walking toward him on the arm of a man whom he had feared as a rival. She wore no flowers. The young officer, like many a man in his first fight, quailed. He left the hall and did not return to it.

Egerton proved the reverse in war of what he was in love. He returned with an empty sleeve and a colonel's commission, with brevet rank of brigadier general. But he had no sooner reached home than his lover's cowardice got the better of him. Sensitive to a high degree, he dreaded meeting the girl who had refused him, his dread being enhanced by the absence of his right arm. A mutilated man nurses his misfortune, and it is doubtful if any soldier is proud of the loss of a limb. The general rankled at his maiming, for he considered that it removed him further, if that could be, from the woman he still loved. To escape a meeting with her as soon as he was mustered out of the service he made a tour abroad. But this only deferred the meeting, and at last he summoned courage and went back to the city where they both lived.

On the street one day he saw her coming. If he continued to advance he would meet her face to face. He looked about him, as he had seen many a man do on the field of battle, for cover. An alley was near. It was a narrow, mean looking lane, but he dashed into it. It led nowhere, and he found himself in a pocket flanked by the rear of small shops. He stood trembling till he knew that his enemy must have passed, then slunk out of it and pursued his way.

A few days later he received a fright that took away his breath. It was an invitation to an evening function given at Miss Harding's home. Fortunately the date of the affair was some days away. He resolved a dozen times to "regret" to go, but, having time to get up a little courage at the last moment, sent an acceptance. It had no sooner been dispatched than he wished to recall it. But it was too late.

On the appointed date he got into evening dress, pinned up his empty sleeve, heaving a deep sigh as he did so, and went to the house. Half an hour in the robing room was necessary to give him the requisite courage to go below. The hosts were drawn up to receive their guests, to Egerton appearing like an opposing line of battle to a raw recruit. He approached, saluted and, seeing a look of embarrassment on Miss Harding's face, as soon as the ceremony was over bent a precipitate retreat.

Later he was stalking about, wondering if sufficient time would ever pass to enable him to depart with propriety, when he felt a hand slipped on his arm and, turning, saw the girl who had refused him.

"General," she said, with her eyes on the floor, "why did you not come to see me after your return from the war?"

"I—why—I went abroad."

"Then why not since your return?" There was a warm hand on his left arm that imparted courage to his heart.

"I—didn't suppose—that you wished to see me."

"Why not?"

There was a pause before the reply. It came at last. "Do you remember that I sent you a bouquet of flowers before the reception given the evening previous to our departure?"

"I do."

"And the scrap of paper in it?"

"The scrap of paper?"

"Yes."

She had led him into a corner where no one but themselves was present. "Wait here," she said.

Darting away, she ran upstairs and returned with a withered bouquet. Diving into it, she withdrew his note written six years before and, opening it, read for the first time his message. Then, taking all that was left of a rose, the stem, she inserted it in her corsage.

NO FEAR OF BEEF TRUSTS.

Golden Words of Wisdom Anent the "Back to the Farm" Slogan.

Here is the view of a Vermont farmer, who signs himself "A Farmer From Town," in a recent letter to a New York paper:

We in the hills have watched with great interest the widely varying comments on the high prices and means for restoring less costly living.

"Back to the farm is the only remedy," but what will induce labor to go back to producing food? The farming population, a fairly large proportion, has simply asserted its right to choose where to work for a living. If labor prefers to build automobiles or to manufacture ladies' hands or even, as we see it, to make cheap wrappers in a New England factory town rather than work on a farm, what is to be done?

The only way to make those one time farmers go back to work on the land is to make it pay, and that would mean higher prices than are now paid the farmer. At present 7 cents per pound, dressed, is the best the farmers of this region receive for beef, 3 cents per quart for milk richer in fat than most that is sold in cities, and vegetables for nearly nothing back from the railroads. But already "the ultimate consumer" pays more than he wishes.

The remedy is back to the farm with "the ultimate consumer" himself. If he will forego fashionable clothes, champagne and canvasback duck, be content with the best beef, mutton and chickens, milk, cream, cheese and butter that any market affords, the city rebel could, with no more than a few thousand invested in land and $500 a year, live like a lord in lovely surroundings and spend some time in town as well.

If, like us, he chops and hauls some of his own wood, plows his own land and cares for his own garden, $2,500 to invest and $300 a year would give freedom and good living—hard for well to do folks to find in town.

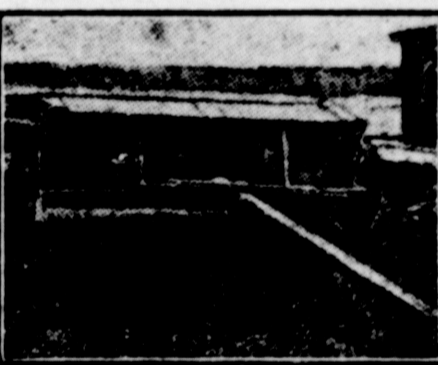

On the farm we have no fear of beef trusts nor of illness. When six months' idleness follows a sickness we have a year's fuel ready, some "critters" to sell, a cellar full of vegetables and an unfailing supply of rich milk from which we make our butter and cheese.

To Build Lime Spreader.

Very useful as a farming adjunct is a distributor for spreading lime, ashes or bone on land. A machine built for this purpose by a New York farmer is thus described:

The axle of an old mowing machine is first cut in two and made as long as the machine is to be. Five collars are then shrunk on to the axle equal distances apart in such a manner as to hold the four feed bars about one inch from the axle. One by three-eighths inch iron feed bars are then fastened to the collars with tap bolts and the heads cut off with tap bolts, making a cylinder which acts as a force feed when revolving with the wheels. The same wheels and ratchets are used that were on the old mowing machine, so it can be put in and out of gear.

The sides of the hopper are constructed of one and one-quarter inch lumber, and the ends are made of two inch hard wood, with iron plates screwed on where the axle passes through to prevent wearing. The inside of the hopper is made one-half inch longer than the force feed cylinder, so it will work easily. The ends and sides of hopper are made separately and put together on the machine. The whole bottom of the machine is then covered with heavy galvanized iron with a 1 by 2 inch hole every six inches, and over this a false bottom is placed so it will slide toward either end to regulate the feed. This false bottom is held in place with three straps made of hoop iron, fastened to the sides of the hopper and worked with a lever at the back. The force feed must work very closely to the holes in the galvanized iron to prevent clogging. The pole is bolted to a 4 by 4 inch stick as long as the hopper. This stick is fastened eighteen inches in front of hopper by bolting it solidly to the two draft irons made of 2 by half inch iron at each end, through which the axle passes, and two heavy braces which hold the hopper in position.

New Variety of Fruit.

The peccot is the name given to a new variety of fruit that seems to have originated in the Yakima valley, near North Yakima, Wash. Two men working separately, each without the knowledge of the other, reached the same results. The fruit is a cross between the peach and the apricot. It is not so large as the peach, but is earlier than either the peach or apricot. It will be valuable as an early fruit because it comes into bearing and ripens soon after strawberries are in the market. It is earlier than the earliest peaches and has a fine flavor. It has a beautiful yellow color, with a bright red cheek, making it an attractive fruit when nicely boxed and ready for the market.

Where Surgery Fails

Cutting Won't Remove The Cause of Piles

Piles mean more than merely the pain of the stubborn little tumors. There is a condition inside that must be dealt with. Cutting is usually followed with later and worse attacks. A permanent cure can only be made by bettering the condition of the parts and getting a free circulation of the blood.

Hem-Roid cures all kinds of piles by internal action right on the cause. Sold by People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa. and money back if it fails. $1 per bottle. Dr. Leonhardt, Station B. Buffalo, N. Y.
